Located on more than 60 acres of deep woods, and surrounding a 2-acre spring fed lake, Valley Mill provides ample space for a vigorous camp program for both boys and girls. The counselors are selected for character and values that make them good role models. Our counselors care about the children and the camp, and they lead the activities with a spirit of fun. Activities include rock climbing, kayaking and group trips off property. Activities of younger age groups are tailored to their capabilities, while older age groups have ample opportunity to excel. Valley Mill emphasizes the development of group cohesiveness and resilience through outdoor challenge. Many children attend Valley Mill year after year, finding increased and deepened experiences each time. With second- and third-generation campers, many young ones arrive for their first day ready to jump in on all the old songs they have learned from their parents and grandparents who were Valley Mill campers before them. And while campers pursue mostly individual goals, they never lose their sense of community.
